

The use of cell phones on the airplane is a recipe for disaster. There is no factual proof that cell phone use doesn't interfere with navigational instruments. Cell phone use would enable terrorists to coordinate a plan of action more effectively. The NPRM would leave it up to flight attendants to police the use of cell phones onboard the aircraft compromising our ability to maintain a safe, secure cabin environment and conduct emergency evacuations. It would make an already tense cabin environment even more stressful. How would you like to be in a cramped middle seat with a very loud man or woman next to you talking about anything and everything? It is just plain rude, and unfortunately people do not understand that not everyone on the airplane wants to hear their conversation. It is the one place we still have where cell phones are not allowed and changing this rule would simply add to the rage we often see in the air.
